The Next Gangbuster Growth Stock

Early Investors Stand to Make a Fortune...

This Time in a Matter of Months.

Are You In?

Imagine a company that sells an indispensable commodity that is soaring in price.

Imagine further that business is so strong sales are tripling, earnings are up more than 30%, and the top executives that run the company are buying millions of dollars worth of shares... in anticipation of a parabolic move up in the stock.

This company is not imaginary, however. It's very real. And while the vast majority of investors have never heard of it, they'll soon wish they had.

That's because investors who pick up a few shares of this company now stand to collect an enormous jackpot.

Read on to learn how three 'irreversible factors' have combined to create explosive upside potential in this little-known investment opportunity. And why the stock is set to vault much, much higher in the weeks ahead...

Best of all, our assessment is confirmed by 'The Divergence Indicator,' a dead-on predictor of future stock movements that can only occur when rock-solid fundamentals are combined with corporate insiders buying millions of dollars worth of the shares, with their own money, at current market prices.

That's exactly what's happening here now.

And while Wall Street and the mainstream financial press have missed this story altogether, it won't be long before the whole world learns what's happening here. Of course, by then, we'll be on our way to the bank...

So time is of the essence. That's why I'm contacting you now...

A Perfect Stock In An Imperfect World

My name is James Boxley Cooke. I'm a former executive with T. Rowe Price, one of the oldest and most respected names in mutual fund management.

I'm no longer in the mutual fund business, however. Today I serve as the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the world's largest private financial fellowship. And, quite frankly, my position as head of one of the world's most powerful investment groups gives me access to intelligence and ideas the average investor never hears about.

Our results speak for themselves. In the last year, for instance, a special group of us were able to lock in a number of phenomenal short-term gains. Just a brief sampling of our recent winners include:

- 29% in nine weeks in a company that makes nutritional supplements for infant formula.
- 22% in four months in the world's largest web-based auctioneer.
- 43% in ten weeks in an Israeli manufacturer of generic pharmaceuticals.
- 45% in seven weeks in a conservative educational publisher.
- 29% in 27 days in a private, post-secondary education company.
- 18% in two weeks in a leading prison privatization company.
- And 13% in a diversified information management systems company. (That's right. That investment rose more than thirteen-fold in just three months.)

However, none of those investment opportunities had ALL FOUR of the crucial factors 'the perfect stock' has. And the upside potential here is considerably greater.

If you bought Coca-Cola in the 60's, IBM in the 70's, Wal-Mart in the 80's, or Microsoft in the 90's, you made a small fortune-or perhaps a large one-on a single

This stock gives you the chance to make up for every big investment idea investment.

Today, you're going to be presented with a new opportunity of the same magnitude.

The potential here is so immense, this stock gives you the chance to make up for every big investment idea you ever missed, every financial mistake you ever made. It's a short-term opportunity with the potential to send you down the road to total financial independence.

you ever missed,
every financial mistake you ever made.

So let's get started. Here's how thousands of hours of research and diligence-and our own proprietary Divergence Indicator-allowed us to finally identify 'the perfect stock.'

The Four Factors That Make 'The Perfect Stock'

Please understand that situations like these are exceedingly rare. In my forty years of experience, I've learned that three 'irreversible factors' must come together to create the perfect stock. And-even then-they must be confirmed by another equally-potent fourth indicator. Here's what they are:

#1 The company must sell an indispensable product. If consumers have a choice about whether to buy your product or not, they might choose 'no.' That's not the case here. Because the product happens to be natural gas. Now I'll be the first to admit that natural gas is not a sexy story like cancer drugs or cutting-edge web-based applications. But that's the beauty of it. You see, this company is quietly and stealthily minting money for shareholders, without drawing a lot of attention to itself.

Production is soaring. Earnings recently bolted over 30% higher. The stock is in a confirmed up-trend. And yet the odds are better than 50-to-1 that neither you nor your broker have ever heard of this company.

But you soon will. Because at the rate this company is growing, the whole world will soon learn what they're doing. Already this company is the #1 driller in the country. And their reserves are safe and sound, right here in North America. Not buried offshore near Indonesia or in some god-forsaken area of the Middle East.

That's important. Because it means we also have a high margin of safety.

#2 There must be a structural imbalance between supply and demand, creating a sustained spike in prices. Natural gas recently traded at six times the level it did three years ago, an unprecedented increase. Why? Natural gas reserves hover near historically low levels. And this isn't about to change. The American Chemistry Council reports that 'what Americans face is no longer a seasonal disturbance, but a fundamental structural imbalance in supply and demand for natural gas.'

Hear that? 'Fundamental structural imbalance.' That's music to our ears. And it's not coming from some brokerage firm or industry pitchman, but from the independent, objective American Chemistry Council.

Production is soaring. Earnings recently bolted over 30% higher. The stock is in a confirmed up-trend.

The reasons for this imbalance are well known. Natural gas is preferable to coal and other fossil fuels because it is clean burning, easily transportable, and historically highly affordable.

While prices have come down from the highs of last spring, many industry analysts agree it's only temporary.

Admittedly, this is not good news for us as consumers. But it's certainly positive for this little-known company, which is simultaneously enjoying both a huge jump in prices and sharply higher production.

#3 Near-term business prospects for the company must be much stronger than is commonly recognized. This is certainly the case here. I've checked around Wall Street and most brokerage houses don't even cover this company. They have no clue it has interests in over 14,000 onshore domestic wells. They don't realize it owns more than 3 trillion cubic feet of natural gas. (That's right 3 trillion!) And they are unaware this company is currently the number #1 driller in the U.S.

In short, this company has it all. Gigantic reserves, growing demand, successful exploration and soaring prices are combining to form the perfect stock, one that is set to simply ignite. How do we know? Because our research is confirmed by a fourth very important factor: The Divergence Indicator.

What is it exactly?

The Divergence Indicator, in my view, is the greatest stock selection tool ever devised. Because it means riding the coattails of only the most knowledgeable and successful investors in the market: corporate insiders.

Corporate insiders are the executives who run or oversee a publicly-traded company. They know everything that can be known about the future business prospects of a company: The direction of sales and earnings since the last corporate announcement. New products in development. Whether major customers have recently been gained or lost. Whether the company has received an unsolicited takeover bid. And so on.

Trust me. The folks who run a company know more about its near-term prospects than anyone on the outside looking in.

And here's where the Divergence Indicator comes in. Ordinarily, insiders—who have an obvious advantage in assessing their company's worth—will buy when shares are down and sell when they're up. So when you instead see insiders doing the opposite—dumping at low prices or buying at high prices—this is a divergence from the norm. And it is critical information for investors seeking short-term profits.

Experience tells us to really take note when we see insiders buy at higher prices than their earlier purchases. This usually means business conditions are getting stronger. Better than expected news will more than likely surface a few weeks or months later.

That's exactly what's happening now at this rapidly growing energy company. The insiders there are confirming our research ... and flashing us this very important signal.

A Multi-Million Dollar Head's Up

Not long ago, the CEO of this company and one of his Directors each began buying hundreds of thousands of shares between $5.90 and $6.22.

Before long, the stock began increasing... and so did the insiders' appetite for the stock. Before long, they came back to hundreds of thousands of more shares at approximately $6.75 a share.

Natural gas prices kept heading higher. And so did the stock. Yet that hasn't deterred the insiders in the least. They each bought another million dollars worth of the stock at $7.50 a share.

Still, the stock kept climbing higher. And the insiders each bought another million dollars worth... and another million dollars worth each again a couple months later... and a couple million dollars soon after.

And they aren't the only insiders buying. The Chief Financial Officer has been buying. The Treasurer has been buying. Other officers and directors too.

Experience tells us to really take note when we see insiders buy at higher prices than their earlier purchases. This usually means business conditions are getting stronger.

What do all these insiders see that look so appealing?

Plenty. We already know that natural gas prices have surged. But so have the company's oil and gas reserves.

In addition to being an active driller, the company has been on an acquisition spree. And so far the insiders have been dead right about the company's bottom line. Revenues and profits are soaring. Other financial measures are equally impressive. And the company is even using its cash flow to buy back its own debt!

All this insider buying only means one thing. The market still doesn't realize just how good things are. But we do. And the investors who understand the potential of this 'perfect stock' stand to gain a fortune.

That's why time is of the essence.

30%+... Here We Go Again

Let me assure you that we're hardly new to this sort of thing. We've learned that a scenario like 'the perfect stock' can generate a return of 30% or more. Let me give you just one example.

One of my colleagues, Alexander Green, is a Wall Street veteran, a former research analyst and portfolio manager. He makes a specialty of monitoring and analyzing insider activity in publicly traded companies. And he runs a highly successful trading service based, in part, on heavy insider buying. Let me tell you about a special situation he revealed to us not long ago.

In June of 2002, he noticed that insiders at a company called Western Wireless were buying millions of dollars worth of the company stock. He immediately notified the members of our financial fellowship and told us to BUY THE STOCK NOW. Here's what he said:

'Chairman John Stanton and Executive Vice President Theresa Gillespie have bought millions of shares. Many of the other officers and directors have bought tens of thousands of shares too.

'The average wireless stock (already selling at distressed levels) is more than ten times as expensive as Western Wireless.

'In my view, this astute group of insiders who have scooped up a boatload of shares before a recovery in wireless shares begins.

'Investors often claim that insiders buying their own company's shares have an 'unfair advantage' because of their access to material, non-public information. Western Wireless presents an opportunity to make that unfair advantage ours.'

Was his analysis on target? You be the judge. In less than five months Western Wireless doubled. Twelve months later the shares had more than tripled. And in just nineteen months, they were up more than 30%... and- as I write-they're still rising!

Western Wireless turned out to be a 'perfect stock.' And now we're looking at yet another one.

Crucial Intelligence... Enormous Profits

Let me put this special opportunity in perspective.

Maybe once in a generation a company comes along that is not only wildly successful, but actually changes our way of life.

Forty years ago, it was IBM. Thirty years ago, it was Wal-Mart. And nearly twenty years ago, it was Microsoft.

Early investors in these companies did not become millionaires. They became billionaires. And even investors who took a very small stake had their financial lives completely transformed.

Now history is repeating itself.

And everything you need to know about this company-which you can quickly buy through your existing broker-is plainly and simply spelled out in our latest special report: 'Payoff of a Lifetime: The Perfect Stock.'

This special 'white paper' details all our crucial intelligence on this unique investment opportunity. It's part of a special bonus you'll receive when you sign up for a one-year membership in the investment

'About 19 years ago, I received an invitation to join The Oxford Club. No one I checked with knew anything about you and I didn't join. In November 2002, I again received an invitation to join. After one year, EACH of my investments made following your advice is profitable. The Oxford Club is the only investment advisory renewal I have made. In fact, I renewed for life.' ~Henry Rose

'I opened my investment account in late June 2002 with $44,000 and have rolled up consistent double digit and some triple digit gains on Oxford Club recommendations. God bless You!' ~Homer Ryan

'I should write more often to tell you how well our investments are doing. Thanks to your advice... I keep telling my wife how well I'm doing for us in the stock market. I must admit she knows you guys get a lot of the credit.' ~Ernie Hinds

'The Oxford Club meeting in NYC was excellent. Each of the presenters offered valuable information about the Club and choices we have for protecting and growing our assets. I've paid much more for much less. Truth is, I've attended entire seminars that offered less value than just this 4-hour regional meeting. And the regional meeting was free to members! 'I have been receiving solicitations from the OC for many years. All the while my financial advisor and my broker and my pensionfund administrators managed to lose a significant portion of my money. So I fired them all and joined The Oxford Club. Hey I figured you could not possibly do worse than them. I admit that I was timid and mistrustful (can you blame me!) at thebeginning. Then I started following your recommendations. Lo and behold my investments are actually making, not losing,money. For example I doubled my money on Netflix. I am significantly ahead in all the other recommendations. This is a wholenew experience for me. Keep up the good work. And thanks.' ~G. Ibrahim, M.D.
